

Individual report week 3

Focus this week has been the first sprint! It has been a challenge splitting the workload since I consider a lot of the project tickets be dependent on each other. Therefore, I consider the team need to work on this for the next sprint. However, as a team we managed to figure out a quick way to export our design from figma to android studio which I consider to be a breakthrough. I will keep being available and on time for all scheduled meetings. This week I have contributed towards finishing defining the acceptance criteria for our user stories and worked with the user interface of the app.

Some goals for next week are to keep evolving as a programmer, help the team to complete our second sprint and reflect from previous sprint experiences, probably making some minor changes in team management and how we split tasks.

Final reflections are that we had an additional meeting on Thursday. This seems to be ideal for us because then we can plan on Tuesdays and follow up how the team is making progress in the current sprint on Thursdays.
