

Individual report week 7

This week we have implemented fun fact in the app when we are waiting for a category match in the database. My contributions was to update the database table and figure out how to select a random fact to display. This feature was added because after some reasoning with the PO it will bring more value to the app and was manageable to complete in one sprint. We talked about implementing users to the program however the main idea behind users is to have a point system for the recycling but we figured we wouldn't be able to complete this in one sprint and therefore the fun fact was added. Compared to last sprint I think our team managed to work according to scrum and no features other than specified was implemented. For the final sprint the plan is to make some finishing touches to the product and work on the final report. My finishing thoughts for the last sprint implementing new features is that it has been fun developing software according to scrum and hopefully a really useful experience to have for future jobs as a software developer.
